In the study of the national idea and the development strategy of Uzbekistan, attention should be paid to the fact that the fundamental reforms implemented during the years of independence caused great changes not only in the life of society, but also in the consciousness and thinking, spirituality and philosophy of our people. Should be given. This, in turn, created conditions and opportunities for the formation of a new system of social sciences, including philosophical sciences. In this regard, the reforms carried out in the field of democratization of state power and management, based on the ideas and considerations put forward in the strategy, have a very important goal, that is, the consistent implementation of the constitutional principle of the separation of powers, between the powers forming an effective system of mutual restraint and balance of interests, strengthening the role of legislative and representative powers and control tasks in the center and localities, as well as limiting the centralization of the management sphere, transferring part of the powers in this regard from the republican level to the regional, district and city levels, two it is expedient to pay special attention to the issues of formation of the chamber parliament, introduction and strengthening of the multi-party system. [1]

In the study of the national idea and the development strategy of Uzbekistan, one of the priorities is to liberalize and ensure the independence of the judicial system and turn it into a real institution that serves to reliably protect human and civil rights and freedoms. Analysis is necessary. At the same time, in the field of reforming the information sector, ensuring freedom of information and speech, creating a strong legal framework that ensures the rights and freedoms of citizens in the field of information, the development of mass media, and fully complies with democratic requirements and standards. In Uzbekistan, in the field of ensuring the freedom of the right to vote and developing the electoral law, it is necessary to pay attention to the creation and improvement of the legal bases that serve to form and develop an effective, democratic electoral system in our country. Institutional, organizational and legal framework for the establishment and effective functioning of civil institutions and non-profit organizations that reflect the interests of all layers of the population in the field of formation and development of civil society institutions in the study of the "National Idea and Development Strategy of Uzbekistan" creation, it is appropriate to pay particular attention to strengthening the role of these organizations in effective control over the activities of state and power structures. In the field of further deepening of democratic market reforms and economic liberalization in our country, the main focus is on the centralized administrative command system and striving to understand the actual measures to create the conditions for the formation of the market economy, first of all, the legal base. Helps to master.[2]

Our country became a member of the Cooperation Council of Turkic-Speaking Countries, received observer status at the Eurasian Economic Cooperation Union. For the first time in its history, Uzbekistan was elected a member of the UN Human Rights Council and successfully participated in its 46th session held in the form of a video conference in Geneva on February 22, 2021. Last year, our country became the first chaired the organization of the Commonwealth of Independent States and, despite the pandemic, more than 60 international events planned within the framework of the CIS were effectively held, and about 70 important documents were adopted. [3]

Consistent continuation of structural changes in the economy is one of the main directions in this area. This is the full and effective use of our rich natural resources, intellectual and scientific and technical potential, and the power of producing finished products and quality processing of mineral and agricultural raw materials, which includes the perfect technological process in the economy, takes the leading place. Development of service industries, strengthening their position in the economy, and creating new jobs in the countryside. In this direction, a transport communication system is being established in several directions to develop guaranteed communication, trade, and economic relations with the countries of the world. The implementation of structural changes in the economy, especially bringing industry to the countryside, development of the network of medium and small enterprises for the processing of agricultural products is gaining priority in the economic policy of our state. In the current conditions, when fundamental changes are being implemented in all aspects of society's life in the social sphere, and market relations are gaining priority, conducting a strong social policy remains one of the main principles of our development. This defines the principles of the idea of national independence in the social sphere and serves their realization. A strong social policy means taking care of the people, every social group, stratum, class, every citizen, young and old, male and female - all our compatriots, reforms, economic activities. It is understood that it should be carried out in the interest of the people, not to lose attention to the fields of public education, health care, culture, and science. In this regard, the conclusion that reforms are not for the sake of reforms, but for the sake of the people, to increase their well-being and live a decent life, is the meaning of a strong social policy. This comes from the humanitarian nature of our country's policy. Enriching our values in the spiritual sphere with the achievements of science and development, deepening our understanding of our identity, instilling the principles of the national idea and the ideology of independence into the hearts and minds of our people, falsifying the traces of my sacred religion and history, and using them for political purposes. Not to leave is the main task in this regard. These tasks determine the main stages of manifestation of the national idea in the spiritual sphere.[4]

Uzbekistan is playing an increasingly important role in the activation of integration and cooperation processes in the regions of Central and South Asia. On July 15-16 of this year, "Central and South Asia: regional connection" will be held in Tashkent. The new proposals and initiatives put forward by our country at the international conference on "Threats and Opportunities" aroused great interest not only in the countries of these boundless regions, but also in the world community. In particular, issues of building new transport routes connecting Central Asia with the Indian Ocean were also discussed. The conference once again demonstrated the spirit of Tashkent. Today, the concept of foreign political activity of the Republic of Uzbekistan is being improved. In this important document, special attention is paid to the further strengthening of our relations with the Central Asian countries, which are the priority direction of our foreign policy, in the spirit of centuries-old friendship and good neighborliness, strategic partnership and mutual trust. Uzbekistan's main foreign partners are Russia, China, the United States of America, Turkey, Germany, France, Great Britain, South Korea, Japan, India, Pakistan, the United Arab Emirates and other countries, which are multilateral and mutual. Beneficial relations are expanding. As a close neighbor of Afghanistan, Uzbekistan is interested in establishing peace and stability in this country as soon as possible. [5]

It is known that Uzbekistan will chair the Shanghai Cooperation Organization in 2021-2022. Currently, we are making serious preparations to hold this important political event at a high level. It is getting stronger. In order to support our compatriots in many countries of the world and further strengthen our relations with them, the "Compatriots" fund was established. Our work aimed at strengthening the environment of inter-ethnic harmony and tolerance in our society is reaching a new level in terms of quality. July 30, which is widely celebrated as the International Friendship Day every year, was announced as the "Day of Friendship of Peoples" in Uzbekistan. This year, this holiday was widely celebrated for the first time in our country. It can also be considered as a common phenomenon where internal and external political factors converge. [6]
